READ THE FOLLOWING PASSAGE AND ANSWER THE QUESTIONS THAT FOLLOW.

The two o'clock bell rang to signal the end of lunch and all the learners at Forogo Primary School ran to the assembly point. The teacher on duty, Mr Gwekwerere, was a no nonsense man. No learner wanted to be caught offside and endure the hard punishments he often gave to those who broke school rules. The learners watched him as he strolled to the assembly point. Mr Gwekwerere stood quietly in front of the learners and smiled.

We had had lessons from eight o'clock in the morning till one o'clock in the afternoon. Mrs Maroro, the school Head, had tasked Mr Gwekwerere to supervise the making of a fire-guard around the school premises. Learners had brought different tools, such as hoes, slashers and axes for use during the activity.

More often, people in Jasi area start veld fires for no reason at all. Every year, veld fires destroy vegetation in the area. Both wild and domestic animals suffer too, owing to the scarcity of food. What further worsens the situation is that farmers in the area cannot afford to buy fodder for their animals.

The teacher on duty divided us into four groups which operated in the eastern, western, southern and northern sides of the school. Our group worked in the southern part. The girls did the weeding while the boys were slashing grass, cutting the trees and bushes. By four o'clock, we had finished making the fire-guard.

Mrs Maroro came to inspect the work and was delighted. She expressed her gratitude and asked the teacher on duty to dismiss the learners.

READ THE FOLLOWING PASSAGE AND ANSWER THE QUESTIONS THAT FOLLOW.

Bishop Bhunu was late for a church service. He drove past buses, taxis and lorries along the way to the capital city where the church service was to be held.

As he approached the flyover, near the capital city, he noticed a dark object lying lifelessly in the middle of his lane. "Could this be a human being?" he wondered. Ttoo! Ttoo! sounded the deafening sound of his car's hooter. A heavy change down of gears was followed by a screeching of brakes. Bishop Bhunu failed to stop the car and ran over the object. A boom sound was finally heard. The car skidded and veered off the road. It crashed onto a huge rock by the road side and it was badly damaged.

People around the accident scene heard the boom sound. Out of curiosity, some vendors, motorists, customers from shops and workers from offices rushed to the scene of the accident. They wanted to know what exactly had happened.

READ THE FOLLOWING PASSAGE AND ANSWER THE QUESTIONS THAT FOLLOW.

The Lucky Girl

Revai did not enjoy the benefits of parental care. Some children in Zimbabwe face the same problem. Revai's parents abandoned her soon after she was weaned. Promising to return a couple of months later, they left her in the care of her paternal grandmother.

The parents went to seek for employment beyond our country's borders. Revai 's grandmother took care of all her basic needs, except school fees. She is now in the Seventh Grade and has never heard from her parents. Her grandmother taught her many survival skills. She knows how to cook, wash clothes and kitchen utensils.

Revai is a role model at her school. She is hardworking, polite and adheres to school rules. She often encourages her classmates to take after her. Everyone admires her. Some girls of her age complain when they are given work but she does not.

Although she comes from a poor background, her academic performance is excellent. It was for that reason that her class teacher recommended her to get a school fees grant. A church organisation called Carpenaum Trust provided the scholarship. The organisation promised to pay her school fees from primary to university level.

The beneficiaries of the fees grant sometimes get donations of school uniforms and food humpers. That donation has given Revai great hope to advance with her education.
